

Trento is a sophisticated full grain leather with a pure aniline wax pull-up finish. The leather's singular appearance and rich coloration are the result of the hides being treated with natural waxes and oils without any additional pigments included. Initially, these waxes and oils darken the color of the hides, but when the leather is eventually stretched for upholstery purposes, the original lighter colorations are pulled up to the surface (hence its designation as a "pull-up" leather). The end result is a gorgeous, complex leather with an antiqued, worn-in texture and a distinctive waxy sheen.
